Fashion trends change every year, every season and well, every time Rihanna shows up in some creative design. There is almost nothing that is unacceptable in fashion so while there are cool and simple fashion trends, we also have outrageous and daring trends. One particular daring trend is the plastic/Vinyl fabric trend. This fashion style has been around since the 1960s but keeps popping back in vogue every few years (just like many other trends). 2019 has seen various trends and styles, such as the latest bike pants with blazers that all and sundry seems to be rocking, but how much attention in the present vogue is vinyl fabric getting.

The runway is the most apparent place to tell the current trend or to at least predict what is to come. If the 2019 spring runways were anything to go by, from the gorgeous mustard yellow vinyl dress on Kaia Gerber in Marc Jacob's spring collection to the creative styles of headgear in the Maison Margiela's spring collection, vinyl is in vogue and designers are exploiting its different forms. Vinyl couldn't be more appealing or in style as celebrities like Rihanna (yes, Rihanna), Kylie Jenner, Kim Kardashian have been seen dressed, sometimes head to toe in this daring style. Street dress sense is not left out of this trend, from trousers to skirts (in all lengths), jackets, dresses, in different designs and colors in topmost fashion. Vinyl is definitely the new leather.

After managing to get past its un-breathability, vinyl clothing and can be a little tricky to pair with other clothing material without resulting to a total disaster. Still, every fashion mistake is a style so you shouldn't be hesitant to step outside your comfort zone and risk trying some plastic style. Find the perfect piece of clothing, brand and pairing style that gives the plastic fabric the gorgeous factor on you. Basic fashion rules like comfort should be considered while trying out a vinyl fabric for purchase. Either with the less risky boots, purse, scarves, or all out and daring trench coats, mini/midi skirts, and dresses, you will find a special plastic niche just for you.

However, one big shortcoming of plastic fabric style and in fact other synthetic fabrics is the environmental harm to it. It is non-biodegradable and can add to the textile waste that is not being properly disposed. Individuals and trends are gravitating towards eco-friendly styles that can afford them rocking clothing materials without causing any harm to the Earth. But well, its durable use over a long time and recycling makes it less harmful.

Fashion trends are not static and nothing stays forever in vogue. Nonetheless, at this present time vinyl seems to be stuck in vogue and not getting out-dated any time soon. A big overhauling can ensue in the fashion industry with the next runway event or a designer's crazy fashion innovation but for this present that we know, vinyl is the cool and I hope you really should try this cool trend.
